ABSTRACT

This directory promotes global education, emphasizes the importance of experiencing different cultures as a means of becoming sensitized to the variety of perspectives in the world, and offers students and faculty information information about a variety of international programs. Data and descriptions in the directory are based on responses (N=97) to a questionnaire sent to member institutions (N=220) in the Association of Independent Liberal Arts Colleges for Teacher Education (AILACTE). Information is offered about programs which occur in 65 countries outside of the United States, and cross referencing enables searchers to locate information by way of programs, institutions, or nations. Member institutions have agreed to act as liaisons for information about their programs. Following a foreword, preface, and introduction, the directory is organized into seven sections: (1) semester or year abroad; (2) study tours and summer programs; (3) student teaching or internship; (4) institutional exchange; (5) miscellaneous types of programs; (6) index by country; and (7) index by institution. Foreword

The Association of Independent Liberal Arts Colleges for Teacher Education believes that teachers need to be globally aware. To that end AILACTE institutions recognize the importance of experiences in cultures different from one's own as a means of becoming sensitive to the variety of perspectives in our world, nation, and local areas. While McLuhan's "global village" is even more a reality than when he first used the expression, we know that we need to work to make this concept part of our understanding and action.

The Directory provides help by making it easier to find examples of international studies at institutions like ours. Moreover, many of these opportunities at AILACTE institutions are open to students from other colleges and universities. So, the Directory is also an invitation for us to think about collaboration in making it possible for our students to experience the richness of cultural diversity.

The Directory represents AILACTE's commitment to both celebrate our members' strong programs and at the same time encourage them further to provide quality preparation of new teachers.

Edited by Gary Shreck of Oklahoma Christian University of Science and Arts, it builds on the work of Karen Adams who conducted our first survey of international programs while she was a member of the faculty at Carson-Newman College. As AILACTE's North Central representative Shreck led a second extended survey and took on the major task of preparing the helpful format you find here. The Association thanks both Gary and Karen for their contribution to this project.

Mary Diez
AILACTE President, 1990-1991

Preface

This Directory of International Programs in AILACTE institutions is one attempt on the part of the Association to serve its members by sharing what we do. The data and descriptions that follow are based on responses to a questionnaire that was sent to all members. From a membership of about 220, 97 responded. They offer information about programs which occur in 65 countries outside of the United States. The Directory is cross-referenced so that you can search for information by way of programs, institutions, or nations.

The fact that it is labeled "1991" does not necessarily mean that the Directory will become an annual publication. However, AILACTE has every intention to update it periodically. With this point in mind, please let me or other Executive Committee members know about any new programs, changes, addenda, errors, or suggestions. We will get the word out either through our newsletter, Views and News, or by way of some other message ultimately including the next edition of the Directory.

I echo Mary Diez's thanks to Gary Shreck and Karen Adams. They deserve a lot of credit for the Directory's existence.

Introduction

The Association of Independent Liberal Arts Colleges for Teacher Education (AILACTE) wants to do all it can to promote global education. As the Directory reveals, member institutions offer students and faculty information about a variety of international programs in many places.

After a survey of member institutions the Directory was published in order to communicate the depth and breadth of AILACTE activity in international education. Those responding to the survey were notified that one of the purposes of the Directory was so others could contact them for information about their programs. Requests for information are expected to be answered in the spirit of this assumption.

Part of the information in each entry is "from other colleges." This indicates whether or not the sponsoring institution will accept students other than its own in a given program.

Some programs fit more than one category, but are listed only once. For example, many institutional exchange programs are also semesters or years abroad. So, if readers do not find a description which meets their needs under one category, they should check others.

Hopefully, this publication will be a useful resource to our membership as well as to other institutions and individuals.

This program is in cooperation with Central College, Int'l Studies Office, 812 University, Pella, Iowa 50219-9989. We can send students to any of Central's programs but with Vienna and Wales, we have affiliation so when our students go to those programs, their financial aid and scholarships go with them but not on their other programs. They can apply to Central for their aid. All data is collected through this office and mailed to Central for admittance or rejection but we maintain correspondence with them throughout their leave. This arrangement has been over the past 10 years.

Information on all countries

We have information on studying in almost every foreign country. Reading room, open to students, contains valuable information. We maintain about 4 peer assistants each year to work in this room. These assistants have just returned from abroad and are available to counsel students interested in studying abroad. Each student returning from abroad is asked to complete a 6 page evaluation form explaining in detail their experiences both educationally and culturally so other students may read about the country in which they are interested.

Coe's programs are through the Associated Colleges of the Midwest. Tropical field research using program staff, faculty members from the University of Costa Rica, and government agencies, students conduct independent research projects in the natural and the quantitatively oriented social sciences. Cost Rica has ten ecological zones, all within a day's travel of the capital, ranging from tropical rain forests and savannas to temperate highlands and near tundra. This diversity supports an extraordinary variety of plant and animal life and provides rich research opportunities for students of tropical biology and ecology. Man's historical and contemporary use of this terrain offers an equally broad range of study topics for students of anthropology, archeology, economics, geography, history, political science, and sociology. Coe's programs are through the Associated Colleges of the Midwest. After a summer of orientation and language study in Japan, students spend the academic year studying at Waseda University's International division in Tokyo. The formal study at Waseda combines language study with electives in all areas of Japanese life. Study is supplemented by the experience of living with a Japanese family, which is in many ways the dominant feature of the program, offering total immersion in Japanese family life. Options for independent study in the humanities, or natural or social sciences. A GLCA/ACM program. (July-June)

Coe's programs are through the Associated Colleges of the Midwest. The Florence Program offers serious students of art, history, Romance languages, and humanities an opportunity for intensive study in the city's rich artistic and cultural heritage. This study is facilita- ted by Italian language instruction and courses providing broad historical perspective on Italian contributions to world civilization. Course work supplemented by museum/gallery visits, short field trips, discussions with local scholars. Designed for students with previous experience and knowledge of the fields to be studied. Coe's programs are through the Associated Colleges of the Midwest. The Indian subcontinent, home to almost one-sixth of the world's population, provides a rich and complex background for the study of non-Western civilization. After an intensive orientation term, including language study at either Carleton College or Lawrence University, India Studies participants spend six months in Poona, India, living with native families. Poona is an excellent example of the blend of tradition and modern industrialization that characterizes India today. Students continue language study at the University of Poona and choose four other courses, as well as completing independent study projects. (April-December)

Coe's programs are through the Associated Colleges of the Midwest. For over a thousand years a dividing line and scene of confrontation between east and west, Yugoslavia presents a fascinating setting for the study of nation-building in historical and contemporary world affairs. The Yugoslavia Program enables firsthand study of this historical legacy and of the patterns of modern development which have created in Yugoslavia a unique economic system and a multi-ethnic communist society. Based in Zagreb, the capital and a major cultural center in the northwestern republic of Croatia, the program includes intensive language training and course work at the University of Zagreb, field trips, and homestays with local families. Courses will cover such topics as industrialization and social change, Marxist philosophy, and the development of the social and economic system.(August-December)

Colorado College offers a semester in Perpignan in the south of France each spring. It provides Colorado College students with an opportunity to study the French culture and society in some depth and writing its own linguistic context. Classes are taught on the campus of the University of Perpignan by faculty from Colorado College and by local professors. Students live with host families, and the French language is used in the classroom and in everyday life. The total immersion in French culture provides students with practical experience in language and with direct field experience in the social sciences and humanities through lectures from visiting scholars, visits to museums, field studies, excursions to historical sites, sight-seeing, theater, films, and many other cultural events in Perpignan and Paris, as well as in neighboring Barcelona, Spain. Students can apply for Madre Merrill fellowships, enabling those who have financial hardship to participate in the program. In order to receive credit, students must take all four blocks in France.

The German department offers a semester in Luneburg, northern Germany each spring. The semester provides a balanced approach to intermediate and advanced language study, coupled with courses in the culture, institutions and literature of the German-speaking countries. Classes are taught on the campus of the Hochschule Luneburg by faculty from Colorado College and the host institution after initial, intensive preparation at Colorado College. Students live with host families in Luneburg. A variety of extra-curricular activities and field trips, and the opportunity to travel independently during block breaks and weekends in Germany and neighboring countries, enhance the quality of the program. Upon completion of the semester, students may apply to take the examination for the internationally recognized Zertifikat Ceutsch, attesting to their language proficiency. In order to receive credit, students must take all four blocks in Germany.

This program is based in Paris and focuses on developing and understanding of the dramatic political and economic changes under way in Europe as the European Economic Community moves toward a single market in 1992 and as Eastern Europe is politically and economically restructured. The program will examine the effect these changes will have on relations between the U.S. and Europe. The program is team-taught (in English) by faculty in economics and political science from the University of Hartford and supplemented by lectures and discussions with European political and economic figures.

We have developed an "all-college emphasis" on multicultural and international understanding. On a four year cycle, we each year emphasize the heritage and culture of one area of the world: Africa and Black Heritage; Asian culture and heritage; Native American and Hispanic heritage and culture: Europe and its heritage and culture. We plan speakers for our required chapel-assemblies, special lectures, displays and foods to teach about that area of the world. We also have an academic minor in International and Crosscultural Studies; and beginning in 1989 we have arranged overseas internship and studies.

We have developed "all-college emphasis" on multicultural and international understanding. On a four year cycle we each year emphasize the heritage and culture of one area of the world: Africa and Black Heritage; Asian culture and heritage; Native American and Hispanic heritage and culture: Europe and its heritage and culture. We plan speakers for our required chapel/assemblies, special lectures, displays and foods to teach about that area of the world. We also have an academic minor in international and crosscultural studies; and beginning in 1989 we have arranged overseas internship and studies.
